Three craters discovered on Mars by scientists of Physical Research Laboratory/भौतिक अनुसंधान प्रयोगशाला के वैज्ञानिकों ने मंगल ग्रह पर तीन क्रेटर खोजे

- The scientists of Ahmedabad-based Physical Research Laboratory (PRL) have discovered three new craters on Mars.
- They have been discovered in the Tharsis volcanic region on Mars.
- The International Astronomical Union (IAU) Working Group for Planetary System Nomenclature approved naming the three craters on Mars.

- One crater has been named “Lal crater” after Prof. Devendra Lal, a renowned Indian geophysicist and former director of PRL from 1972-1983. It is a 65 km wide crater.
- The second crater has been named “Mursan crater” after a town in Uttar Pradesh, India. Mursan crater is a ~10 km wide crater superimposed on the eastern side of the rim of the Lal crater.
- The third crater is “Hilsa crater”. It is a ~10 km wide crater superimposed on the western side of the rim of the Lal crater. It is named after a town in Bihar, India.

- There is geophysical evidence of material other than lava in this crater, with a 45-m thick sedimentary deposit in the subsurface of the crater.
- This discovery provides compelling evidence that the water has moved large volumes of sediment into the crater, now named Lal Crater.
- This finding also confirms that Mars was once wet, and water has flown on the surface.
